GO FAST, Young Man

Will NASCAR's Youth Movement Keep Picking Up Speed? By Ryan A. Berenz

Trevor Bayne's improbable Daytona 500 win boosted interest in the NASCAR season from the start

The day following his 20th birthday last year, Trevor Bayne shocked the motorsports world by becoming the youngest driver to win the Daytona 500. The unlikely winner of NASCAR's biggest race was making only his second Cup start, and he led the race for the only six laps that mattered. At age 21, Joey Logano continues to grow his prowess on the track and his popularity with fans. In 2009, he became the youngest driver ever to win a race in NASCAR's top series. Logano didn't win a Cup race last season, but won two poles and finished in the top 10 six times. Did the infusion of youth have anything to do with NASCAR's upswing in popularity last season? Probably didn't hurt. While the youngsters won't contend for the Cup title yet, veterans like Jimmie Johnson, Jeff Gordon and 2011 Cup champion Tony Stewart had best keep an eye out for them in the rearview mirror. Here are a few more things to keep an eye on this season:

- Schedule Shift The NASCAR season starts a week later than usual with the Daytona 500 on Feb. 26. Kansas Speedway will be repaved, which moves its spring race earlier to April 22 and its fall Chase race to Oct. 21. As a result, Talladega will now have the fourth Chase race. The spring race at Texas moves back a week, keeping the traditional Easter week off. The summer race at Daytona (July 7) swaps weekends with the race at Kentucky Speedway (June 30).
- Danica Mania Popular IndyCar driver Danica Patrick leaves the open-wheel circuit this year, racing a full Nationwide Series schedule in the GoDaddy.com No. 7 for JR

Motorsports. She will also race 10 Sprint Cup races in Stewart-Haas Racing's No. 10 Chevy beginning with the Daytona 500.

- NASCAR on TV TSN and TSN2 combine for coverage of the entire Sprint Cup Series season, with FOX also carrying the early part of the season and ABC also airing three races during the Chase playoffs.
- Wall-to-Wall Waltrips On FOX's prerace studio show, Michael Waltrip will replace Jeff Hammond (who will now report from the pits and garage) as an analyst, joining his brother Darrell. We'll leave it up to the viewers to decide if Michael – who will still be a driver/owner during this TV gig – can stay objective in his analysis.
