Hearts will be heavy as the bricks as the IndyCar community remembers 2011 Indy 500 champ Dan Wheldon

A CHAMP Remembered

Thoughts Turn To Dan Wheldon As IndyCar Returns To The Brickyard. By George Dickie

When the 96th Indianapolis 500 revs up May 27 from Indianapolis Motor Speedway, one figure will loom large over the proceedings. And he won't even be there — at least physically.

Dan Wheldon, the two-time Indy 500 winner and 2005 series champ who was killed in a multicausal pileup at last year's season finale at Las Vegas, will be impossible to overlook for many reasons, not the least of which is the fact that had he lived, he'd be the defending race champ.

Wheldon was well-liked and respected by his friends and rivals in IndyCar, and his death last fall devastated the auto-racing community and put a sad end to what had been until that point a successful 2011 season.

One who feels Wheldon's loss more than most is Dario Franchitti, himself a two-time Indy 500 victor and four-time IndyCar champ, who was a good friend and former teammate of Wheldon at Andretti Green Racing from 2003-05.

"Oh, Dan's going to be a huge presence at Indianapolis this year," Franchitti says. "At Indy, the winner from the previous year is on the ticket. There's a big picture — Firestone did a big billboard out front, so Dan's going to be big and large all around the speedway, and that's going to be bittersweet.

"But it's funny, actually. His sister Holly sent me a picture this morning of him and I just after he won last year and he was very emotional. And it was a great thing he did, you know, a one-off race with a small team, Bryan Herta Autosport, and winning that race. That was very, very impressive."

Talk to Franchitti and he'll have many a funny story to tell about his time at Andretti Green. Many revolve around the pranks played among him and teammates Wheldon, Herta and Tony Kanaan. In fact, at a memorial tribute to Wheldon last fall in Indianapolis, the three surviving friends regaled the crowd with stories of their practical jokes, many of which were at Wheldon's expense and played on his propensity for neatness.

"In those situations at that point, he was kind of the younger brother we kind of picked on," Franchitti says. "But he definitely got us all back because in 2005 he won the championship and the Indy 500 when we were all teammates. So he got the last laugh, absolutely."
